After two years of intensive repairs and renovation, the former House of Raeford Farms chicken processing plant in Mocksville is now hiring with plans to begin operations in October.

The central portion of the manufacturing facility off Eaton Road was heavily damaged by a fire in December 2017. Brakebush Brothers, a 94-year-old family-owned value-added processor of traditional and innovative chicken products, purchased the facility from House of Raeford in July 2018.

Brakebush has upgraded the facility with state-of-the-art production equipment and has expanded it from 72,000 SF to 110,000 SF. The updated facility will accommodate three production lines with three shifts and will employ over 300 team members when fully operational. The initial production capacity will be 90 million pounds of chicken annually, which will increase as lines are added.

“We’re excited to be a part of the Mocksville community, to continue our tradition of excellence in producing quality products, and providing an exceptional work environment for our employees,” said Scott Sanders, president of Brakebush Brothers.

The company is now hiring for first shift, with a start date of August 12th. Available positions include production associates, industrial maintenance technicians, RETA-certified refrigeration technicians, waste-water technicians, and more.

Recruitment for second shift will begin in November with a start date of January 2020.
